HEALTH IMPACT DAY 2015

Health is precious. It is important to everyone and is only complete when, despite our brokenness, we are physically, mentally, spiritually, and socially whole.

Today, every church is invited to take part in Health Impact Day by conducting health programs and distributing the book Health & Wellness: Secrets That Can Change Your Life. What do we expect health leaders to do today?

Health Impact Day can be a great opportunity to show our communities we care about their well-being and at the same time share the gracious gift of good health and God’s unconditional love for all. How can we do this?

Share our Christ-centered messages of health, hope, and healing. Celebrate the natural remedies God has given, and share that we can enjoy wholeness even in our brokenness.

Invite friends and neighbors to a healthy, tasty, vegetarian dinner.

Arrange a special nature walk to emphasize the benefits of exercise and the enjoyment of God’s amazing creation.

Screen blood pressure, sugar, and cholesterol levels in a community center or at the church.

Prepare a youth-oriented evening about health that includes presentations about illegal drugs, tobacco, and alcohol.

Start a health/exercise club for the community with weekly Sunday morning walks.

Arrange opportunities to take youth groups to prepare meals for homeless groups and distribute them with the assistance of adult church members and mentors.

Start a recovery program/group on Health Impact Day. This should continue into the future as well.

Host a health emphasis event at least once a month throughout the year. An excellent resource for this is Celebrations, available at Healthministries.com (along with sermons, lessons, and PowerPoint presentations; all free of charge). There is a children’s version of Celebrations as well. Subscribe to the daily health hint from PositiveChoices.com.
